Concept of a container A Docker container is a self-sufficient lightweight virtual computer (VPC) that runs a single software package. The containerized software package (application) is run by the application's container (docker host) and does not rely on host resources. A container can be run on a single host, or can be run on multiple hosts as part of a cluster. In addition to running on hosts, containers can be run on Docker's cloud service, Docker Cloud, and on Amazon EC2 instances. The key points are: Docker is an orchestration tool. Docker is not about Virtual Machines, the goal
